Session title as it should appear in program materials:

Protecting Our Children – Internet Safety Presentation

Description of content you will cover - as it should appear in program materials: Please be specific about what you will address – if you will include cases/work through examples - this helps registrants decide which sessions are most relevant for their learning needs.

Keeping students safe in a wired, media-driven society is no easy task. If you are in a rural community school district, this task is increasingly difficult. In this presentation, you will learn how one community (Seymour, WI) has joined forces between local law enforcement agents, school district resources, and community leaders in order to promote and educate students and families about being safer with technology. As a school nurse you can be part of bringing another personal safety tool to your student body and community by learning how to bring school resources together. School nurses may be on the front lines, learning from students what they have been doing with technology. This training will help you understand what to do with the information a student gives you.

Please write a few lines we can use to introduce you at the conference:

Investigator TJ Hilgenberg has been in law enforcement since 2002. Investigator Hilgenberg currently works for the Seymour Police Department, is assigned as investigator for the department and the Police School Liaison Officer for the Seymour School District. Investigator Hilgenberg has investigated many incidents involving Internet Crimes Against Children where suspects have been convicted at the State and Federal level.
